

1455 MARKET THE PLACE TO BE

1455 MARKET has undergone a dramatic transformation from its days as a data processing center for confidential financial institution. It's now home to today's leading tech companies, including Square and Uber, who enjoy the building's block-long floor plates and abundant windows. Retail and restaurant along bustling Market Street has been completely reimagined for the neighborhood's day-to-evening customers and spaces feature new facades, covered outdoor seating and building signage.

In 2011, the city government introduced a tax incentive to encourage the densification of tech businesses. Twitter Inc headquartered to the former SF Furniture Mart and since then nearly two dozen tech companies, venture capitalists and co-working space providers have located to the area, including Zendesk, Yammer, Spotify and Dolby.
